The Great Challenge

For the June 1960 issue, the staff of Observatory has chosen "The Great Challenge" as the theme for the Senior Yearbook. What is this challenge and why do we on Observatory consider it to be so important?

The challenge has many manifestations in our school lives. It is a moral challenge, a challenge to our character and integrity, which must be met every hour of every day. It is the challenge of scholastic achievement, the pursuit of knowledge for its own sake and not for the sake of a report card mark. It is the challenge to be a good leader, to exert a positive influence on the people with whom we have contact in our day-to-day activities. If this begins to look like a reiteration of the Arista ideals, it is indeed exactly that, for the pursuit of these standards of excellence is the "Great Challenge" for any student, and it is a challenge not to be passed over lightly.

Observatory, in presenting the story of the class of 1960, has attempted to show how the "Great Challenge" was faced through our four years of high school attendance. By and large the class of '60 was a good one, and some of its achievements may remain as an inspiration to future Science students. We must not, however, fall into the trap of letting complacency cloud our chance for continued success in the future. Although we have given a good account of ourselves in high school, we must remember that the truly valid test of our strength as individuals is still to be met. To meet this test successfully is our new "Great Challenge."

From The Principal

TO THE CLASS OF JUNE 1960:

"These are the times that try men's souls."

The words are as valid now as they were in the days of Thomas Paine. Indeed, the challenge that has tried men's souls has been a continuing one. No generation has escaped it although, to each, it has seemed that the particular challenge was new and unique.

Today, we live in a world of great upheaval. Everywhere there is political, social, and economic turbulence. Everywhere there is a yearning for the more abundant life. Everywhere there is the demand for well educated citizens who can play their parts in the dynamic march ahead. The challenge, however, remains the same. As always, it is directed to the principles by which men live, to the ideals which they cherish, and, above all, to their determination to live by those principles and ideals.

As you of the class of 1960 look more closely at the world about you, you will find a cynical atmosphere that puts great emphasis on material values. It is easy in this environment to lose sight of the ethical, moral, and spiritual values that give life meaning and direction. Yet, the great lesson to be learned, and learned soon, is that without the realization of these values there can be no fulfillment or happiness.

For you, therefore, the challenge of the times will be, as it has always been, a challenge to the ideals by which you choose to live.

Sincerely yours,

DECISION

BRUCE ACKERMAN
ROGER SWAYBILL

EDITORS-IN-CHIEF

As soon as we entered the Bronx High School of Science, we were forced to make the most important decision of our school career. We had to decide what our goals as a student would be. Were we to be content merely to “get along”; were we determined to fight for every point in order to get the highest possible grade; or were we able and strong enough to go to school solely to learn, to think, and to develop as a human being?

For all of us the choice was difficult. Looking about, we saw a world where, with discouraging frequency, the corrupt thrived, the unjust flourished, and the decent were plowed under in the turmoil.

This decision was, in reality, the determinant of our sense of values — the “Great Challenge” to our intellect, to our conscience, and to our character. Then, unceremoniously and perhaps without our personal awareness, we made our choice.

Now our senior year inexorably draws to its end. The choices we made since we entered Science have made us what we are now. All of us have given up certain easily-arrived-at pleasures so that we could pursue others further from our grasp. In our last frenetic weeks at Science we ask ourselves— “Were my achievements worth my sacrifices?” The answer in each case must be unsatisfactory to some degree, and to that degree the future becomes more alluring than the present. In the future, the 780 members of the class of 1960 will be exposed to a new existence — one which will remold thoughts and remake personalities. Memories of life at Science may soon dwindle to a few half-forgotten names and experiences, but what Science has offered us and what we have done with our high school years will remain with us.

The significance of the role of the high school in determining the ultimate station of our adult lives is often underestimated. We hurry past these adolescent years with the thought, “the sooner ended the better.” What we fail to grasp en route is the immense opportunity for growth and maturity which our secondary school attachments afford us. It is the old story of getting out of a job what you put into it. Before our chance is missed, we should pause and reflect upon the passing years. This reflection may open our eyes to many heretofore unimagined fields in which we may use our ambition.

High School lays the groundwork for our future; let not its benefits and opportunities go to waste. We must be equal to the “Great Challenge.”

THE TAMING OF

When we first entered Science, we were quite vexed—
Belittling of students a FRESHMAN expects,
But regressing to grade school, the worst-dreaded hex,
We felt ostracized, even more than annexed.

We began each new day just like Santa's reindeer;
The prancing 'cross roof-tops brings
mem'ries so dear;
The accrued daily bulletins on Fridays
we'd hear —
We remember so well from that first fateful year.

Our program was one which was called integrated,
Civics, and science, and English collaborated,
From Friday morning clubs we were not separated,
With discussions and class trips we were pervaded.

Our afternoon "dances" were enterprising tries;
With prescience of French tests we were never surprised.
Long library assignments provoked

many sighs;
Science Hall was relieved when we bade
our good-byes.

In SOPH-O-MORE year we reached
our height,
By entering the towers that
"reach . . . truth and light."
We awaited "hearts and powers to solemnly unite,"
In the ancient Main Building, barely standing upright.

A big little man, famed for self-reliance Told us of detention for tardiness and defiance;
With mandatory track meets he'd made his alliance;
He'd planned our activities right
"down to a science."

The seniors laughed at us with heartless glee,
And described frog dissections in biology.
They sold us lounge tickets at a phenomenal fee,
And prophesied our failures for
"ever-loved" M.D.

Oh, mechanical drawing, the joy of a sophomore —

THE SHREWDs

(History of the class of '60)

We made isometric projections galore;
The crooked T-squares made our plates hard to draw — Quoth Science student "Nevermore."

Our "nourishing" school lunches were not smoothly catered;
The sundry rare "delicacies" were far from gourmet-ed;
The food in our stomachs felt heavily weighted —
We were not disappointed; we were just dissipated.

For a pool in the new building, we were still praying,
When we went, one grey day, to the cornerstone laying.
We heard of the mural, and the price
they were paying —
The prospects for swimming were unfavorably swaying.

When election time came, with its campaigning spree,
We chose Linda Friedman for Soph
secret'ry;
Harry Pincus as President;
Bob Lapkin, V.P.
Great parties and dances were arranged by these three.

When our Dr. Meister took

"to the road,"
Mr. Taffel took charge of our
"humble" abode,
And proclaiming our fashions were not "a la mode," Induced our adherence to the
"approved" dress code.

Spring did approach us with June drawing near,
Our first "Regentitis" was soon to be here,
NO-DOZ and Barron's diminished
our fear,
And with maximum mishaps we ended
the year.

We proudly became JUNIORS; upper class seemed quite nice,
We thought there'd be "sugar" and minimum "spice,"
The G.M. Rae "masters" charged a very high price,
To the many whose talents just could not suffice.

Class President, Joel Engelstein, took a very firm command,
And Sue Hellmann, our Secret'ry, lent
a helping hand;
With Vice-President, Tom Constabile,
they very carefully planned
The theatre parties, dances, and prom —

all of which were grand.

Biology we'd mastered — we thought it was a breeze,
But then discovered chemistry could not be learned with ease;
We were taught about the ions and why things melt or freeze,
And the "blissful" thoughts of physics made us quiver at the knees.

The girls were spared from swimming;
the boys didn't fare so well,

We all, however, suffered from the pains
of S.T.L.: From tests on saws and rivets our averages rapidly fell,
The halls still echo "Hey Sonny;" an anonymous S.T.L. teacher's yell!

We finally moved westward in March of '59,
To our beautiful new school, which was ready "on time,"
We were marched through the yard in straight double lines,

To the tune of shouting monitors and megaphones sublime.

Fresh plaster and paint caused this building to reek, Whenever it rained the ceilings would leak,
From walking long corridors we did
grow weak,
In our seatless auditorium we often could peek.

But soon this new "factory" seemed more like a home,
The mazes of hallways we learned
how to roam,
The mile hikes from subways we dismissed (with a groan),
And for ever-nearing Regents we started to bone.

Our junior year taught us the real meaning of "test,"
With SQT's and Boards, there was ne'er time for rest,
But with "high" intelligence and bountiful zest,
We proved, beyond doubt, that we were the best.

At last we turned SENIORS —
superhuman, un-peered,
For such great distinction we were justly revered,
At this zenith plateau we became
most endeared,
Rejections by colleges were "all"
that we feared.

As Senior Class Pres., Vic Marrero
was elected,
Dan Fermaglich and Judy Gurland were also selected;
With their contagious class spirit
we became most infected,
After many class functions we felt not neglected.

We were pros at using acids, sulfuric
and hydrochloric,
And at counting BTU's for equivalents, caloric We "apple-polished" teachers but results were not euphoric,
For though teachers called us seniors,
they thought us sophomoric.

We trimmed senior hats with the greatest variety,
Our twelve dollars dues were not paid
with much piety,
We bought senior jewelry to impress
our society,
Wearing rings, pins, and buttons we moved with propriety.

We were forced to face up to the
"mild" situation,
Of choosing and filing our college
applications,
Since "Ivy League" schools were the hoped destinations,
Our meetings with grade guides were ego desecrations.
Q. "May I apply to U. of Morristown,
For I like their school colors,
chartreuse and brown?"

The guides read old school files and said with a frown,

A. "Last year, five were accepted
and all turned them down.
For you to get in will be that much harder,
With a 99.293 — you could still be much smarter;
Though you've 800 Boards, you won't meet their charter, Unless Mom or Dad calls this school 'Alma Mater.'"

Through our whole senior year we were "busy as bees,"

With scholarships, mid-years, Regents
and S.A.T.'s,
The colleges invited us for interviews
and teas,
'Twas "the time that tried Seniors'
souls" — as everyone agrees.

Letters from schools were impatiently awaited,
The arrival of decisions soon culminated
In most boys' and girls' feeling very elated —

We could finally believe that we'd be graduated.

As we move from your portals, and our memories accrue,
We'll recall all our good times, for sorrows were few;
To your Green and Gold symbols we'll ever be true,
And now Science High School, we bid
you adieu.

COLLEGE ADVISER

The Greater Challenge

ROBERT HOROWITZ AND ARTHUR SANDLER

Our school was built as a showplace. However, there is one place that we don't show — the Guidance Office. This is our secret weapon against Russia, Brooklyn Tech, Harvard, and creeping socialism. Located in the depths of the Campus Level, this secluded office is the habitat of the mysterious Grade Guides.

Having located the Guidance Office with the aid of a floor plan and four Hall Squad members, and having passed the initial obstacle of being mistaken for a member of the Guidance Squad and being sent up to the third floor with a message, we found most of the Grade Guides ready and willing to dispense advice to anyone who wanted it, and to a few who didn't, on such matters as college, scholarships, and how-to-make-sure-you-don't-stay-at-Science-for-a-fifth-year.

We found our Grade Guide, however, sitting comfortably underneath his desk and partaking of his usual morning meal — aspirin and a bowl of lumpy oatmeal. "Care to join me?" he asked.

We declined his offer.

"Just one minute," he said, downing his fourth aspirin. "Squad!" he called in mellifluous tones. "Squad. SQUAD! SQUAAAD! ISN'T THERE ANYBODY ON SQUAD HERE?" He was about to launch into his customary speech about what the new generation was coming to when a squad member meekly appeared.

"Were you calling me?" asked the Mercurian-Arista-point-accumulating-messenger carefully dodging the Grade Guide's flying paperweight.

"Er . . . yes. Just wanted you to pick up that paperweight." And then to us: "Can't do everything around here myself, you know."

"Now, what can I do for you?" asked the Grade Guide displaying his first smile in days. "College? Scholarship? Failing Physics? Headache? Neuritis? Neuralgia?"

We started to explain that we had traded our headache for an upset stomach, and our hopes for some disillusionments, but decided on: "We need a sure third choice if City won't accept us."

The Grade Guide obviously did see. "What's your average?" he asked.

"99.734218 — approximately, that is."

"Hmm. This might be difficult. Well, let's see what I can find for you," he said, as he pulled out his ouija board, cleverly disguised as Lovejoy's College Guide. He made a few mystical passes. "Ah-ha! Here we are. How about Swahili A and M?"

A pallor came over our faces. Our visions of Harvard, Yale and Princeton had been shattered. All we could do was stammer: "B-but we don't speak Swahili."

"That's all right," he cheerfully assured us. "They speak A and M."

Discussion now turned to the fact that if we were accepted at Swahili, we could not afford to pay the exorbitant tuition rates which Swahili was charging in a vain effort to keep up with M.I.T., in at least one category — price. The Grade Guide was about to explain that if our father was a member of Local 707 of the Pretzel Benders' Union, we would be eligible to take a competitive exam for a full scholarship. Fortunately for all concerned, the bell rang at this moment.

Only rarely does the Guidance Office resort to ouija boards, or even dice, in selecting colleges. This is proved indirectly by the fact that the guidance staff manages to get everyone into a college, usually one which the student wants to attend, and one that is suited to his needs and abilities. Our Grade Guides have also aided us in other matters. Time and time again, students have sought their Guidance Counselors' advice on problems relating to their school work, extra-curricular activities, and personal affairs. With their help, the Senior Class of 1960 has met and successfully faced the great challenges that are presented to every class at Bronx Science. After graduation, the members of the 1960 class will be facing, individually, a greater challenge, that of college and a career. Thanks to the untiring efforts of the dedicated faculty members of the guidance staff during our stay at Science, we can go out to meet this new challenge with a little more confidence than many high school graduates. So, at graduation, it is fitting that we thank Mr. Bernard Manson, Director of Guidance, Mr. Benjamin Sellinger, Chairman of the Scholarship Committee, and our Grade Guides: Mr. Abraham Baumel, Mr. Emanuel Bloom, Dr. Louis Cohen, Mrs. Esther Dichter, and Mr. Milton Kopelman.

From Our Senior Officers

The end of the senior year has dawned upon us, and with it a challenge to the future. As lower termers, we spent three years enviously admiring the senior's pride in his hat and button, his joy in the festive atmosphere of Senior Day, and even his sorrow in graduation and in bidding his last farewells. Now that our time has come, we know how it feels to be the envied, admired, joyous, sorrowful Senior.

The members of the class of '60 were fortunate to have had the opportunity to spend their senior year in the new building. As officers, we feel that the privilege of being first in that category could not have gone to a more deserving class. Even as sophomores our class showed unmistakable signs of its future greatness. As seniors, our class led the school scholastically, athletically, socially and "school spiritly".

We continued to break tradition with our offset newspaper, The Fourth Year Scratch, whose predecessor, The Second Year Itch, had unequalled success. Senior Day will be remembered as the happiest of school days.

To us, it was a great privilege, perhaps the greatest in our lives, to have been chosen as officers of the senior class of a great school. To those whose cooperation made it possible for us to function, especially Mr. Jacobson our faculty advisor, and to every individual senior, — Thank you, and good luck!

VIC MARRERO, Pres; DANNY FERMACLICH, V.P.; and JUDY GURLAND, Sec.

The PLANNERS

For the past ten months, game bands of weary seniors have sat hunched over scarred tables in dimly lit rooms, and have, to a large degree, made the social hopes of the Class of 1960 a reality. These students have struggled to find ideas for good times, and struggled further to provide outlets for our unbounded energies and enthusiasm. Dances, a senior show, and many special events give irrefutable testimony to the success of these students.

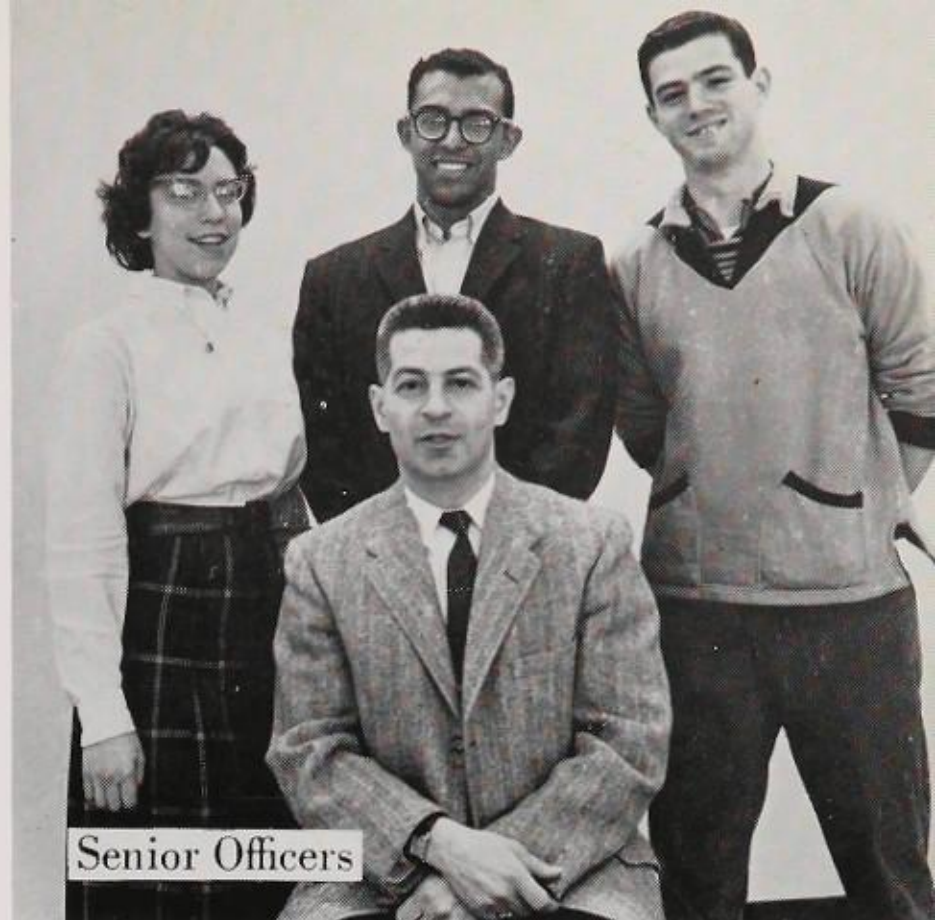

The officers of the senior class have done much to make this year a happy one. Victor Marrero, our President, was one of the writers of the Senior Show. Danny Fermaglich, our Vice President, was also an author of that very funny show. Judy Gurland has done a fine job as Secretary. All of the officers worked diligently to make our events successful.

Let us give recognition to the Special Events Committee, headed by Bruce Rubin and co-chairman Leslie Fink. This group was responsible for finding out just what the Senior Class wanted in the way of special activities, and then coming up with events which would satisfy the demands within bounds of reason. Members of this committee included Ralph George, Charles Brauner, Eugene Briskman, Michele Sklarin, Susan Hermann, Roberta Halpern, Lynn Beiser, Cora Bierman, Felice Bernstein, Lois Pokross, Helen Weinstein, Mira Rosenberg, Steffi Kalish and Marcy Denman.

Now it is all very well and good to have special events, but what good are they if no one comes? And how can people come if they have no tickets? Logical questions to which the Ticket Sales Committee provided a reasonable answer — sell tickets. Under the firm, yet gentle hand of Skipper Causewell Vaughan, the crew of the Committee sailed through a treacherous sea of apathy and insufficient funds to bring many activities to a happy and financially successful end. (And how's that for stretching a metaphor?)

The co-chairman of the Not-So-Hidden Persuaders was Andrea Leskes. The members of the junior Grey Flannel Set answer in this order: Marilyn Kalinsky, Linda Brodtkin, Leslie Sokolsky, Michele Sklarin, Lois Pokross, and Vicki Youngstein. The males in the set were George Kissil, Mike Finkelstein, Al Unger, Hal Kugelmass, and Donald Stephenson. (I don't know where the Ticket Sales Committee has been learning the techniques of salesmanship, but they clearly demonstrated their abilities when I went to interview them. Does anyone want a ticket for the Dempsey-Tunney fight?)

Never to be forgotten are the Senior Representatives whose tasks included extracting twelve dollars from their classmates for Senior dues. It has been asked many times just what does the Senior Office do with all that money. And the answer serves to highlight the efficient job which Mr. Jacobson, Senior Class faculty advisor, and the Senior officers and Reps do in organizing the various operations that serve to make the final year of high school a more happy one. The items for which the money is used include class dances, the yearbook, S.O. dues and privileges, and the "lovely" hats and pins.

Of course, the Senior Rep's job involves not only collecting; it also entails distributing such items as Senior cards, hats, and pins. One of the hardest-working Senior groups, the Senior Council, is comprised of Larry J. Platt, Barbara Wexler, Dale Lindenberg, Peter Hoffman, Diane Levy, Gail Gorenstein, Phil Gerstein, Douglas Berg, Barbara Rogow, Hal Kugelmass, Stewart Rubin, Arthur Priver, Mike Finkelstein, Herbert Bergman, Andrea Leskes, Alan Shapiro, Ralph George, Bruce Rubin, Danny Marcus, and Larry Miller.

Several other senior committees have also been working admirably to make this year a great success. The Dance Committee, headed by Linda Friedman and Barbara Rogow, sponsored two very successful Senior Dances. Editor Mike O'Hare and staff supplied us all with inside tips and worthy information in the Senior Newspaper, Fourth Year Scratch.

As Spring began to look like more of a possibility, the Senior Prom Committee crawled out of its burrow. With a few pep-up talks from the chairmen, Danny Marcus and Danielle Fraenkel, the members started working on one of the hardest jobs in the schools. Their Herculean task was to convince the Seniors to want, need, and pay for a Senior Prom. After a few anxious weeks, the final total of sales was announced: fifty-six tickets sold (actually fifty-five, because one was mistakenly sold to a gullible Freshman). Only two days remained to sell the additional required 125 tickets. Although the sun rose the next day on a scene similar to the blizzard of Eighty-Eight, the necessary tickets were sold, and the Prom turned out to be a glorious success. By the way, the members of this committee were: Ann Pinsky, Ken Pinsker, Sheila Siderman, Nancy Silver, Fred Oberstein, Alan Freeman, Mike Goldberg, Madelaine Cooke, Jerry Fischhoff, Joan Hecker, Libby Zimmerman, and Sarah Greenberg.

An original and very amusing Senior Show was written by the combined genius of Danny Fermaglich, Victor Marrero, Serena Rachels, and Fran Stillman. It was entitled, "They Shall Not Pass," and was a fitting satire on school life.

Without two very important people the senior committees might never have operated as efficiently as they have. Mr. Jacobson, the Senior faculty advisor, has done an excellent job in guiding the committees in their activities. Special tribute must also be paid to Miss Doris Eliazon, who, as faculty advisor of the Student Organization, is responsible for superbly coordinating its activities. She has done her customary job of making the impossible seem only a bit difficult. Thank you, Mr. Jacobson and Miss Eliazon!

And to all those who helped make our Senior year at dear old Bronx High School of Science a happy and enjoyable one, thank you!

JEFF GREENFIELD

ARISTA

RICHARD DAYNARD

Early this year, a sophomore, looking for the S.O. Office, noticed a cubicle marked Arista. Through the glass panel above the lettering he could distinguish a small group, clustered about a desk, minutely examining a long mimeographed sheet. One member of the group drew out a $1 Parker Jotter, vigorously made circles on a paper, and, when the ink began to flow, made a small check in the top right hand corner. The puzzled student, being a true scholar, inquired, and found that the group, Arista Pres. Bob Horowitz, Vice-Pres. Terry Krulwich, Sec. Nancy Silver, and faculty advisors Mrs. Eidenberg and Mrs. Lawner, were engaged in selecting, on the basis of Scholarship, Character, Leadership, and Service, the latest crop of Arista members from the myriad of applicants. After heated argument with their Spring term counterparts, Pres. Charles Brooks, V.-P. Douglas Berg, and Sec. Jeff Mallow, the decision was clinched.

The sophomore, a boy of definite aristocratic tendencies, decided to try for Arista. Realizing that Arista membership entailed certain sacrifices, he immediately foreswore eating. Since he knew that Arista members may not fail any subject, he applied to Diane Alexander and Charles Brooks, Co-Chairmen of the Arista Tutoring Committee, for tutoring in Spanish, Biology, Mechanical Drawing, Social Studies, Geometry, English, and Health Education. To keep his file in Mr. Rae's office reasonably thin, he ceased dismantling Auditorium seats. To fulfill his leadership requirement he joined a Cub Scout Pack, and, through deft manipulation, became an Akela, or Assistant Den Chief. He found getting his service credit more difficult, for he had only three free periods ($3 \text{ periods} \times \frac{1}{2} \text{ point per period of service} = 1\frac{1}{2} \text{ points}$). So he gave up sleeping, and now arrives at school in time for the —6th period (4:37 AM) custodial squad. He also joined the Administrative Squad, the Advanced Chem. Squad, Art Squad, Alumni Squad, Animal Squad, Automotive Physics Squad, and Cross-country, indoor, and outdoor track teams, giving him a total of $417\frac{1}{2}$ service points for the year.

Next year will be much the same. Sometime in the Spring he will receive a mimeographed application form. He will enter his service points, add up his marks and divide to obtain his scholastic average (90.01), and confidently hand in the application. But success will not come this easily. For when he finds his average he will neglect to use the Scientific method of computation, by adding his major marks, taking the first derivative, adding S.T.L., and taking the definite integral, using periods 1 and 9 as the bounds.

As a senior he will encounter little difficulty. His application will be quickly approved; he will be handed a green and gold pin, and a yellow carnation, and will sit on the stage where he, and a horde of fellow students, will be duly inducted.

GEORGIA DOBRER

I was stationed in the S.O. Office. I was happily gazing out the windows, watching the late line grow and grow, when I suddenly heard a bellow. It appeared that Miss Eliazon was being admonished for using last year's Mr. Rae stamp on her pass.

Meanwhile, back in the office, my face took on a solemn appearance. A sophomore entered. The sight of his naive face recalled to mind my childhood ideas of the S.O.

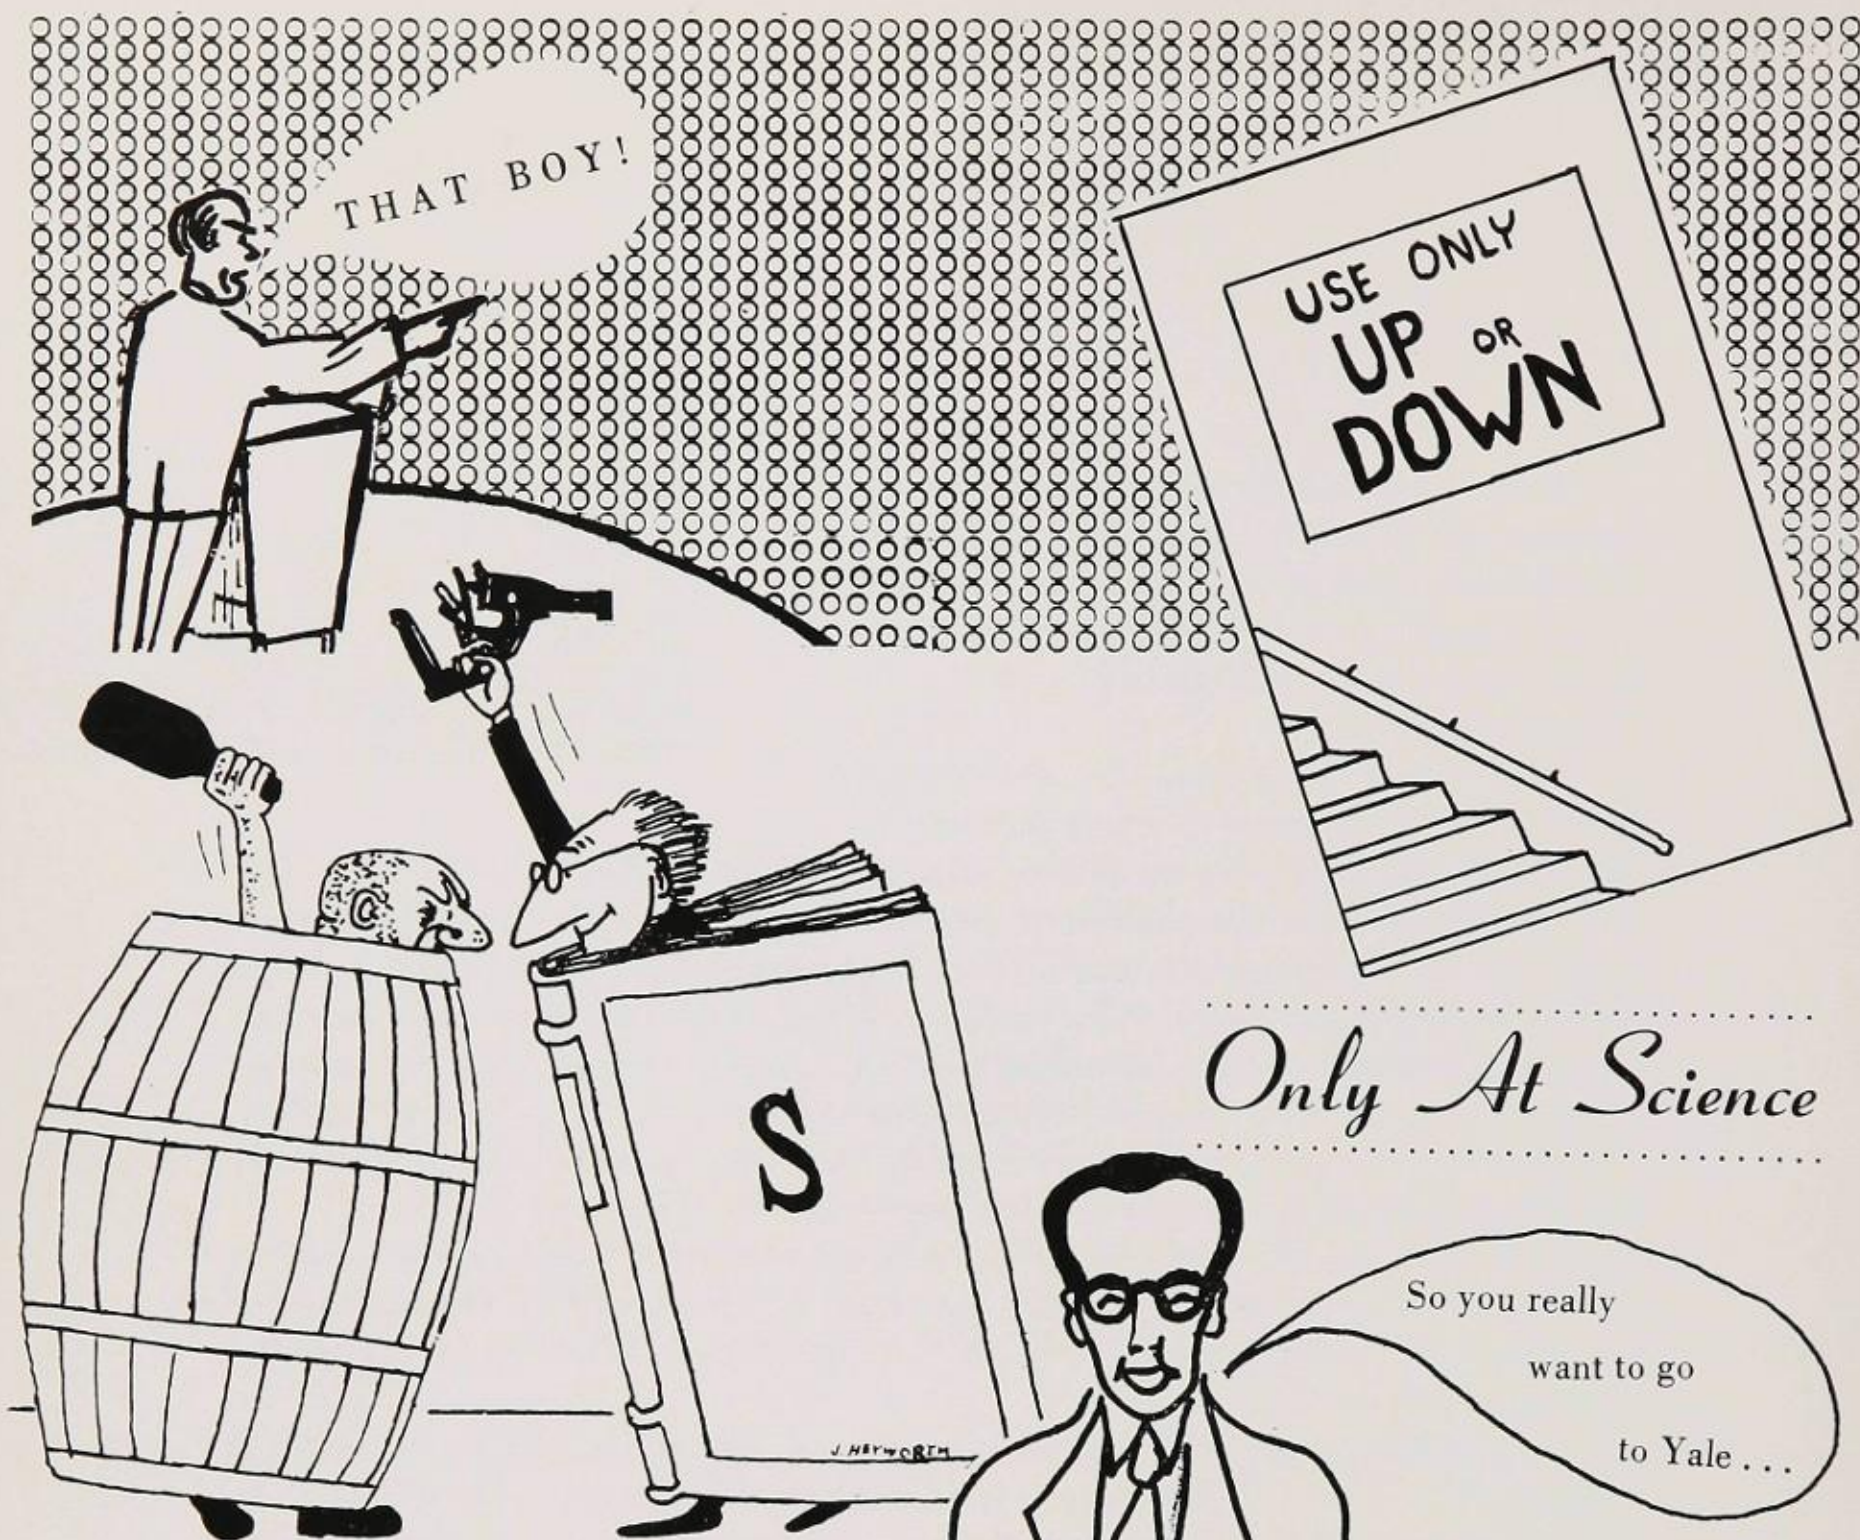

At first the S.O. was something which cost money to run. Only my desire to participate in the committees made me part with my $3. (At that time Ira Bloom and the Big Brothers didn't exist, so their coaxing didn't ease this tragic parting.) Boy! Was I disillusioned when all sorts of applications were rejected. I remember charging into the S.O. Office and demanding my rights or my $3. I got neither. Some senior, who tried to look very worldly, thoroughly confused me by explaining the difference between the right to participate and participation.

Being kicked by Susan Guggenheim, parliamentarian, our mighty president yelled ouch, thereby signifying the beginning of the meeting. Having ushered out retiring officers Bob Lapkin, Mike O'Hare, and Susan Hellmann, Leo Levy tried to conduct the meeting.

Amy Sheldon, chairman of the Community Service Committee, suggested a "Protect Miss Eliazon" campaign. Martha Karpeles offered the services of the ushers to ward off angry parents. After five minutes of heated discussion on the question, President Levy, overcome with emotion, left the room. During the next ten minutes, Vice-President Linda Freedman gradually fashioned order out of chaos, and finally received a report from the "Be Kind to Substitutes Committees." Pete Rubenstein expressed amazement at the falling death rate, but insisted that appropriation for decent burials be increased. In view of her position underneath the swarm of alternate reps, each demanding that his attendance be checked, Diane Levy, S.O. Secretary, favored the bill, which was passed, as Mike O'Hare, Eddie Bernstein, Gene Dennis, Jerry Dorros, Joel Engelstein, and Danny Marcus of the "Losers' Club" announced their support of the legislation.

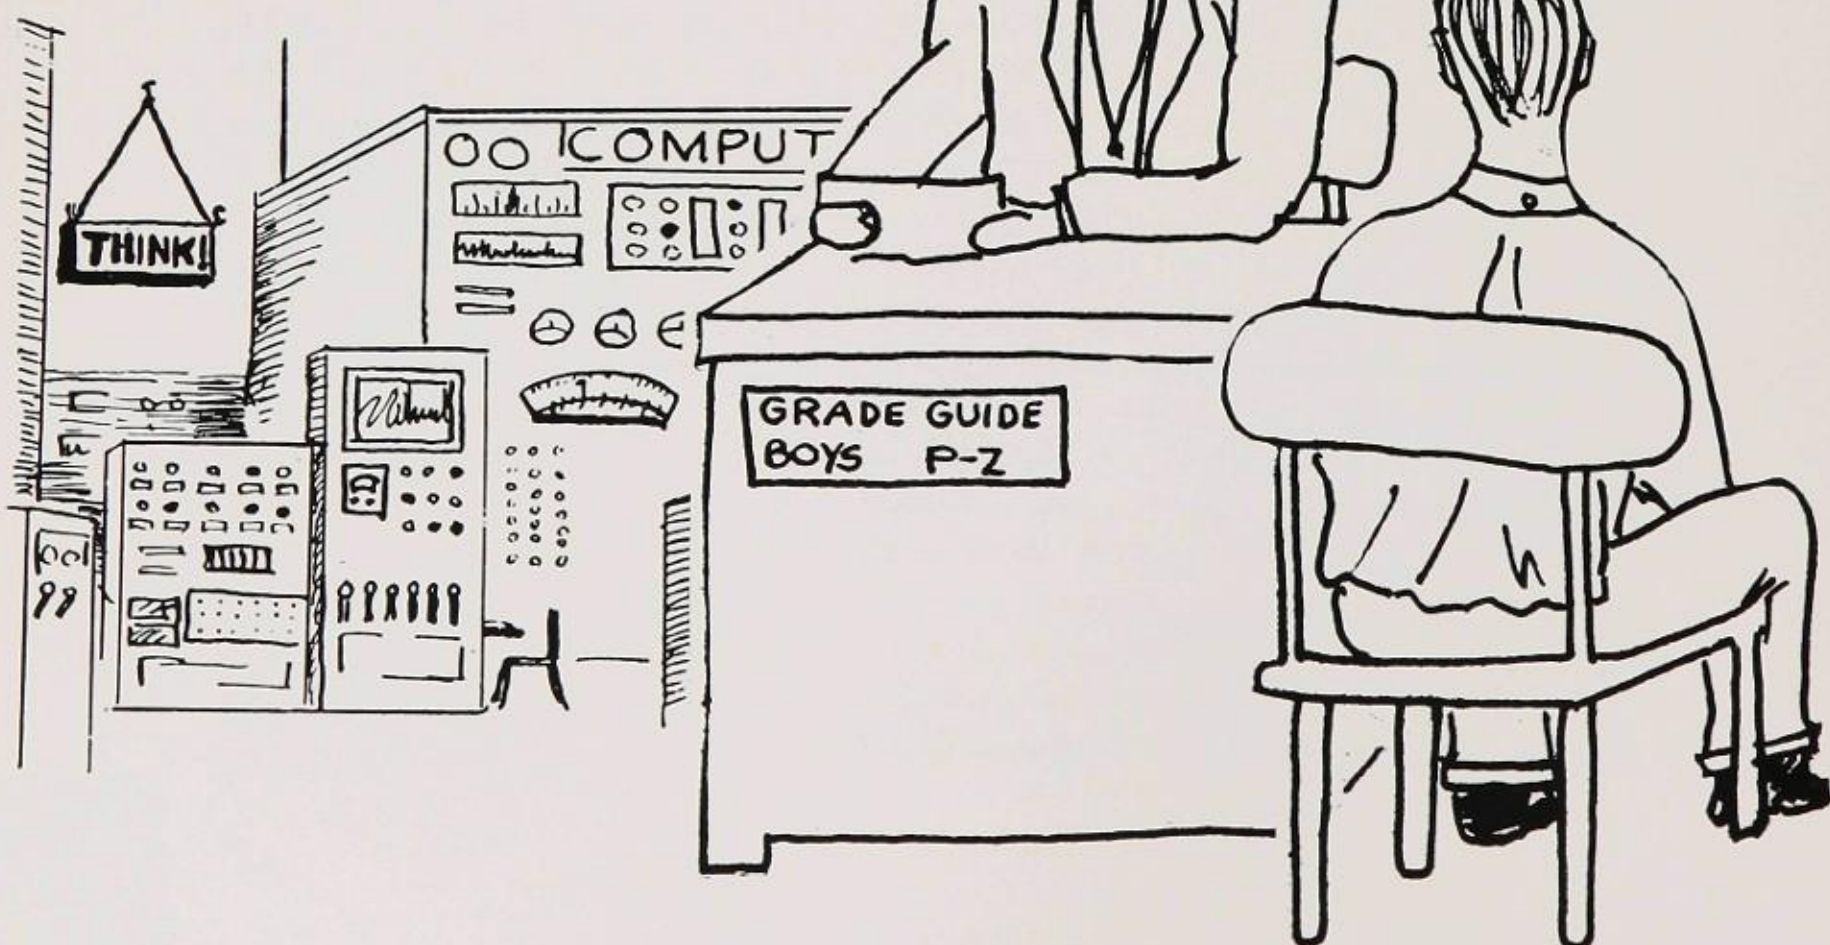

Eli Minckoff then asked what had happened to our appropriation for the Aquarium Club, but the discussion was postponed in order to appropriate unemployment insurance and fringe benefits. The funds and gratuities were dispersed as follows: Leo Levy, shinguards; Sue Guggenheim, Leo Levy; Diane Levy, the lower classes; Bruce Ackerman, unemployment insurance; James Rome and Pat Blumenthal, one another; Mike O'Hare, a recount; Bob Lapkin, lower S.O. Dues; Mr. Lazar (treasurer), a loan; Lucy Halpern, the right atmosphere at the lounge; Lorraine Billitzer, season dance tickets—the meeting was adjourned.

CLUBS AND SQUADS

SERENA RACHELS

Although only a few of us have known of the existence of the Astronomy and Radio Squads, most of us have had occasion to remember the Luncheon, Hall, and S.O. Store Squads. These three squads have the respective jobs of: pulling out those unfortunates who find it impossible not to move when the whistle is blown; keeping out stray Clintonites; and crawling eagerly under musty shelves to dig out an authentic Pompeian reviewbook.

The members of the Guidance Squad industriously copy transcripts (later to be sold on the local Black Market) in between debates over the possession of the highest I.Q. The Language Office Squad eats its lunch while Mr. Hodes eats his; the Library Squad (under the efficient direction of Mrs. Mildred Suesser, Mrs. Ruth Handel, and Miss Ettie Goldberg) puts the books back on the right shelves.

With our move to the new building, the S.O. Office Squad was finally able to invite its friends in for discussion (led by Miss Doris Eliazon).

Since it is impossible to mention all the squads, we think it best to name all that we can remember and a few of their members. (Please address all complaints to the Editors-in-Chief: Roger Swaybill and Bruce Ackerman. (See, we got your names in, as we promised).)

In no particular order, we have: the English Office Squad, whose members were Pam Dodes, Debby Lurie, and Annetta Kimball; Math Office Squad, with Norman Levitt, Robert Strichartz, and Richard Daynard; the Music Office Squad, containing Judy Weiner and Andrea Miller; the Art Squad, whose sole member seems to have been Debby Lurie; the Camera Squad, revolving about Bennett Meyer, Allan Bergelson, and Danny Auerbach; the Physics Lab Prep Squad, with Norm Levitt, Charles Lindauer, Norm Lifschutz, Bennett Meyer, and Judah Landau; the Chem Prep Squad, which included Thomas Lewis, Susan Pinsky, and Gerard Pessis; the Bio Lab Squad and Animal Squad, some of whose members were Doreen Brenner, Ann Sarney, Ronald Leiberman, Barbara Wexler, and Necia Grant; the General Office Squad, which revolved around Carmen McAvoy; the Emergency Drill Squad, whose sole member whom we can find was Danielle Fraenkel; the Mimeograph Squad, whose only member that we know of is a junior-sized Freshman; and the S.T.L. Squad, whose members include those taking STL for the third time.

Having polished off the squads nicely, we now turn our beam on the extra-curricular Clubs (a term meaning only that you can't get Arista credit for them) and miscellaneous organizations without that appellation.

One of our most dynamic organizations was the Forum, whose Executive Committee consisted (wholly) of: Carol Fleisher, Thomasine Holloway, Peter Rose-now, Bruce Ackerman, James Rome, Samuel Uretsky, and Neil Silverman. This group has worked hard to invite those speakers who will enlighten Scienceites on important current affairs.

The Language Department offered a French and Spanish Club. The French Club offered practice in conversation, but the Spanish Club offered instruction and practice in the Latin American dances — Olé! Mr. Mufson.

"Tis the curse of service..."
—Othello, I, I, 35—

Carol Jacobs and Terry Krulwich, speaking for the Bio Experimental Society, told me that those Seniors who were engaged in project work during the school year often discussed their work with interested sophomores. In this way, the seniors were not only furthering the study of science for themselves, but also were enabling their successors to meet the challenge of scientific invention and discovery.

The Chemistry Club, whose activities were organized by the President, Richard Shavitz, boasted an increased membership. Guest speakers, as well as student speakers and graduates, spoke to this group. Many of the students including Bruce Cutler, Joe Hashmall, Ann Sarney, and Bill Sharp (who were also members of Mr. Cherry's project class), discussed the work in which they were engaged.

Many Science Seniors devoted their leisure hours to activities in Math. The various Math Clubs of the school enabled these students to compare their findings in the field of mathematics. In addition, guest speakers addressed the groups on various topics of interest. Seniors active in the functioning of the Math Experimental Society were Norman Levitt, Geoffrey Heyworth, Arthur Priver, and Stephen Stein.

The Bio Club, which had over two hundred members, was extremely active. Besides having guest speakers, the club visited Brookhaven National Laboratories, and the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Research Institute, as well as other places of interest.

This year, the Trinity Club gained popularity. Students in charge of this club include Ralph Schmidt, President; Joan Abrams, Vice-President; Peter Hoffman, Secretary; and Florence Patterson, Treasurer. The planning committee was headed by Maria Rivera and Audrey Campbell.

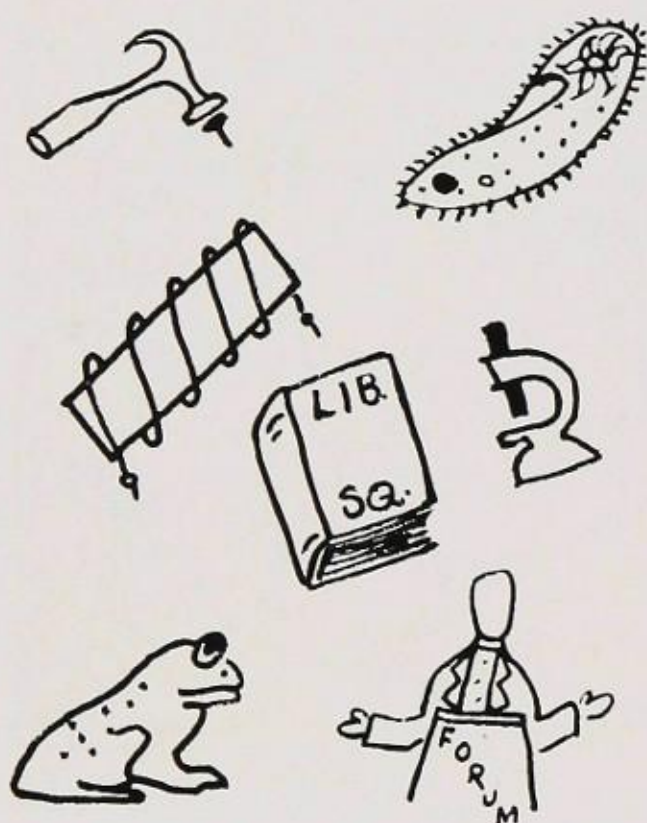

The Modern Dance Club was established for the first time this year. Marcy Denman and Helaine Weinstein, along with sophomore and junior girls, practiced basic modern dance steps.

The facilities of our new building will make it possible to have a really active Amateur Radio Club and Astronomy Club. Plans for future activities of these clubs were carefully planned by this year's officers, Jeffrey Czeisler and Norman Levitt of the Astronomy Club, and Larry Dworsky of the Radio Club. These plans include the use of two telescopes left by former Scienceites Steve Strom and Jay Pasachoff.

The members of the Orchestra (that fighting organization led by Mr. Rensin) were so great that to mention only a small fraction would be meaningless. The Mixed and Girls' Choruses were also mob scenes, so we shall just quietly mention that they were bravely conducted by Mrs. Lawner.

Some seniors also participated in the Chess Club, Checkers Club, Bridge Club, Record Club, and Volleyball Club. Yes, we were a club-joining group.

SENIOR ELECTIVES

ANN SARNEY

When in the course of the school year it becomes necessary for programs to be arranged, the Science Junior is faced with a weighty problem: that of choosing his elective subjects. This choice is made especially difficult by a conflict between two emotions. One of these concerns the need to take courses suitable as college preparation. The other is related to another need: that of satisfying the ever-present urge to get away with the least possible work. An interested Junior might appeal to the Guidance Department for help and find his first alternative supported; he might ask a Senior and be promptly advised to base his choice on the second.

Let us suppose that this year one such Junior, whom we shall call Zacherly (to avoid resemblance to Scienceites living or dead), was at this point confused enough to want to see the elective classes for himself; he might have attempted to make a tour of the building for that purpose.

As a typically confused Scienceite, our student started his inspection in a far corner of the third floor. He first observed what he found to be a class in Blood and Urine Analysis. Amid the clash of test tubes and the clatter of pipettes (at $1.00 apiece), he noticed a brave student analyzing his own blood under a microscope, only to discover he was so anemic he could not possibly be alive. Our Junior, less hardy than most, retreated to a corner of the room where he was greeted by other squeamish souls waiting for the tea to come to a boil. (Tea, did you say? — An editorial attempt at discretion.)

Next, in the Home Technology laboratory, Zacherly saw several girls surveying their latest creations—popovers! He was told that they also engaged in such mundane activities as the study of textiles and nutrition, but after a taste of one popover, he did not care.

On his way to the laboratory, Zack met two dozen or so noisy characters armed with butterfly nets, cigar boxes, and the like. These lucky few, members of a Field Biology class, often escaped at midday for field trips to the wide and fertile fields of Van Cortlandt Park. There they observed the various species of flora and fauna in their natural habitats. In the course of the year the class also visited such places as the Bronx Zoo and a genetics laboratory at the Museum of Natural History.

The College Biology class was next on our student's itinerary. While the specially-selected students munched birthday cake and potato sticks, they took part in one of the finest classes of its kind in the country. Included in the year's work were original research projects inspired by the teacher, Dr. Edward Frankel, and three and one-half lunchless weeks, inspired by a well-used, formaldehyded frog.

Junior descended to the second floor to explore the chemistry department, which this year offered three elective subjects. The first one he saw was Mr. Cherry's course in Advanced General Chemistry. His students were busily sweeping up ill-fated pieces of glass tubing with which they had been attempting to construct wash bottles. Once they overcame this hurdle, the students studied various aspects of physical, colloidal, organic, and food chemistry on an advanced level.

Walking into an adjacent laboratory, our explorer was greeted by several worried-looking students holding reagent bottles. Some seemed quite discouraged; their solutions apparently contained nonexistent chemicals! Their course in Analytical Chemistry, taught by Dr. Joseph Harwell, consisted of the study of theory and laboratory practice of qualitative analysis.

Junior crossed over to the College Chemistry room, where Mr. Richard Siegel was teaching a group of twenty students, selected for their high scholastic averages and abilities in chemistry, the rudiments of spoken English. Their course was remarkably complete, covering the first-year college course and a course in qualitative analysis.

On the first floor Zacherly entered what appeared to be a glorified garage, in which a few boys were engaged in the exploration of the inside of an automobile. This, of course, was Automotive Physics, from which the boys finally emerged experts on every phase of auto mechanics.

Next door was the Radio Physics laboratory; Junior did not linger there since he was oppressed by the silence accompanying two dozen boys making elaborate slide-rule calculations.

Fifteen brave individuals, carefully chosen by the department, were observed in the College Physics class taught by Mr. Herman Gewirtz. This was an advanced general physics course, for which many of the boys received placement in college.

Do you know what effect Newton's laws had on civilization? Or don't you care? Well, our Junior next witnessed a class in the History and Development of Science, in which this and similar topics were discussed.

Our explorer next moved to the math department, which this year offered a variety of elective subjects. One of these was Math 87, covering advanced algebra and solid geometry, and including as one of its less popular features a Regents examination. Math 81, called a "modern" course in Twelfth Year Mathematics, included fundamentals of symbolic logic (some snoggles are lukes), group and set theory, function theory, and an introduction to calculus and analytic geometry. Math 9, a course for selected students, covered first-year calculus and analytic geometry.

College Math, taught by Mrs. Henrietta Mazen, was an advanced placement course for the best qualified students. These godlike creatures appeared unconcerned with lower forms of mathematics; the use of calculus made up for their apparent inability to add and subtract.

Math 11, or Mathematics of Science, known familiarly as The Computer Thing, was next on Zacherly's agenda. In this course students applied mathematical principles to the solution of everyday, household problems, such as the computation of an eclipse and the programming of an IBM 650 computer. An apparently unique feature of the course was that its teachers often disagreed on the answers to particular problems.

Our student made a tour of the Advanced Art rooms, viewing the newest masterpieces of the students, and then visited a class in Advanced Mechanical Drawing, in which budding young architects were presented with the formidable problem of designing a house.

Junior left, then, for a visit to the English department, where he viewed Dr. Isabel Gordon's class in College English. Students fortunate enough to gain admission to this class became 1) Expert typists, as a result of practice on numerous research papers, and 2) aware of the dramatic irony and poetic symbolism involved in the way Hamlet, Job, Electra, and Antigone ate their respective breakfasts.

Next Zack saw a class in World Literature, taught by Mr. Max Nadel. Here students exhibiting special interest in the great books of the world received an intensive course with stress on that subject. Supplementing this, other topics were included in the curriculum to stimulate the students' collective imagination; these included such erudite subjects as spelling and grammar.

Our student, by that time thoroughly exhausted, finally flopped into a chair in the Guidance Office, determined to repeat third-year French and elementary chemistry during his Senior year.

Who Says Science Doesn't Pay!

Hear the deep-throated roar of the mighty engines! See the sparks fly from the metal as the motors whirl faster and faster! Smell the choking exhaust fumes as the engines develop the final burst of power! Where are you?

Not in the Automotive Physics shop, that's for sure. Because of an unfortunate one year delay in transporting lab equipment to the new building, the lab is barren of such essentials as wheels, a body, and screwdrivers. Let it not be said, however, that paltry supplies ever deterred Mr. Heitner and his faithful band of juvenile delinquents from investigating the greasy world of the automobile.

In the course of the year, the students in Mr. Heitner's class have discovered many fascinating and obscure facts. For instance, did you know that 93% of all cars that get stuck do so on the Whitestone Bridge? That's just one gem from a veritable greasepit of information to be discovered in room 123.

Perhaps the most enjoyable and profitable lesson in Auto Physics was the one in which Mr. Heitner showed his students how to start a car without a key, or, as the trade calls it, "jump the spark." During the three weeks following that lesson, twenty-six cars were reported stolen in the Bronx Science area alone. Who says science doesn't pay?

SENIORS IN SPORTS

The Science sports picture, influenced by the advantages of the new building, has undergone a radical transformation. Our baseball team's home site, Harris Field, is conveniently located, and large numbers of rooters attend all games. Fans also packed the gym to cheer the basketball team; season tickets, a major innovation, were sold out in a week, to the dismay of latecomers. Our cheerleaders performed before full houses for the first time. This newly-found school spirit was the outstanding characteristic of the athletic year, making its mark on our teams' "won and lost" tallies. Reviewing each team's record this year, the importance of the contributions of the members of the class of '60 is proved repeatedly.

TENNIS The class of 1960 faced a big challenge in this field; our Racketmen were out to capture the city championship for the fourth consecutive year. Led by Captain Hank Kaplan, the team appeared capable of achieving this goal. John Cohen and Hank were the leading senior representatives on the team, with additional help from Geoff Heyworth. Hank, a member of the team since his sophomore year, provided the necessary leadership. His powerful serve and his effective offensive net game made him difficult to beat. John, on the other hand, supplied the team with sorely needed depth. His game was based on sound back court stroking, a baseline attack, and a dependable serve. Adding moral support and oranges were managers Ruth Daniel and Ellen Solomon.

In Coach-of-the-Year Leon Alcala's able hands, tenniswise, the Class of '60 was ready to go-go-go.

TRACK AND CROSS COUNTRY This year, the records of our track and cross-country teams, co-captained by Bill DeAngelis and Mike Smith, were unusually impressive. The Harriers' great capabilities were shown in the P.S.A.L. Cross-Country Championships where they finished second in their field of thirty teams. The varsity accomplishing this feat was made up entirely of seniors Smith, DeAngelis, Eddie Harrow, Julian Offsay and Steve Schwartz. In addition, individual awards were presented to Eddie, who finished fourth of some two hundred runners, and Billy, who despite injuries that kept him out of action most of the season, finished tenth.

In the track events, major positions were occupied by senior milers Harrow, Offsay and Larry Feiner; middle-distance men, Smith, DeAngelis, Dan Gogol, Keith Endo, Dan Paget, and Eliot Markson; and sprinters Joe Borden, Henry Zelman, and Lee Toon, who also broadjumps. The team had added support from senior shotputters, Dave Kirby and Dave Acker. Both the team and their coach, Mr. Levenson, were proud of their fine accomplishments.

HANDBALL With the same energetic spirit which had led many victorious teams in the past, Coach Michael Werblow enthusiastically looked forward to another banner season. Joel Wisotsky, captain and mainstay for three years, together with veterans Jerome Price and Lenny Sachs, formed the nucleus of what looked like another high caliber team. Manager Joyce Shotland, and the rest of the team, were especially looking forward to beating our long-time division rival, Clinton. It appeared that hard work and practice could well be rewarded with victory.

SOCCER Our soccer team also deserves a niche in our Hall of Fame. The mean object of kicking a ball over a dirty field and finally steering it between two goal posts was not the end in itself. Our brave warriors rose above such displays and looked upon the game in a broader view; a more humane, sophisticated, civilized interpretation. The soccer ball was not just the inflated bladder of a pig; it was the symbol of the forces of nature that perpetually challenged man's efforts. The opposing teams were the deluded mortals who prevent the progress of man, and deserve pity rather than a kick in the pants. The co-captains, Stokely Carmichael and Gene Dennis, showed their masterly leadership in preventing the abasement of the opposing teams. The others on the team, John Messing, Morris Simson, Mark Gottdiener and Mike Urkowitz, through their tricky footwork resembled the intricate maneuvers of an advanced theorem in higher mathematics. They managed to play most of the time in enemy territory, but would not brutally assault the enemy goalkeeper. The bulwarks of our defense, Jerry Dorros and Jeff Panken (goalie), stubbornly risked life and limb. Garlands and bayleaves to our soccer team who turned defeat into victory and showed that doing is what counts rather than the end itself.

GOLF The Science Golf Team, led by senior Don Erikson, anticipates another successful season in 1960. They and their coach, Mr. Cafarella, hope to do even better than their 1959 record of six wins and only one loss, to undefeated Clinton.

BASEBALL As the 1960 baseball season approaches, the faces on coach Force's bench are bright and cheerful. With a Fall practice under the team's belt, and the fading of inexperience into the background, Mr. Force and his players expect to have a fine season—"If we get those hits from the six returning varsity-lettermen."

The field will practically be a repetition of the '59 Varsity Team which, with little experience and a new coach, placed fourth; walloping M&A twelve to five, and almost upsetting Clinton and city champ Roosevelt in the final innings. Calling signals as catcher will be Jerry Dorros, a three year P.S.A.L. veteran. Stu Rubin, a good fielder, will be at first base, and co-captain Ronny Marino, a great base-stealer, will be at short-stop. The outfield will be patrolled by three varsity men; outfielder (and sometimes pitcher) Seymour Rosen, a three year vet in left; co-captain Bob Schwartz, seeing action for his fourth year (a catcher in his freshman and sophomore years) center; and Jack Leitner, a powerhouse against Clinton, right. On the mound will be M&A victor Joe Duvinsky, and little lefty Marty Abromowitz. In reserve will be catchers Stu Alpert, and fielders Steve Lakner, Shelly Goldberg, Vic Marrero, Paul Hinden and Ronny Friedman.

The team has gained experience and a good deal of poise. With the aid of its coach and lady luck, it will be a team to be reckoned with in the '60 season.

BOWLING This year's team, under Coach Ben Allen, has once again made a fine showing. Despite the squad's inexperience, veterans Bob and Danny Greenwald and Gene Friedman led the team through a good season, of which the record is not an entirely accurate picture. The team's victories, over Dodge, Gompers and Bronx Vocational, together with an excellently bowled match in a two pin loss to Clinton, are basis enough for considering this year a successful one. In addition, Science had more men in the Borough Individual Championships than any other school in the city. Bob Greenwald led the Alleyemen with a high game of 201. This season there was no need to cry, "wait 'til next year."

BASKETBALL "They'll be down by twenty in every game!" said the pessimistic Science fan, but the cagers, led by six members of the Class of 1960, scrapped, rebounded, and shot their way into contention. Although we came out on top only twice, our inexperienced squad earned the respect of every team in the league.

Co-captain Bob Schwartz was the leading scorer on the club this season. During every minute of the playing time, the blonde whiz was in the midst of the fray, leaping, rebounding and shooting.

Our other Co-captain, Harry Pincus, affectionately called "Killer" after the overwhelming Music and Art victory, was the steadying influence on the team during the season. In his second year on the club, Harry scored well and was one of the outstanding defensive ballplayers in the league.

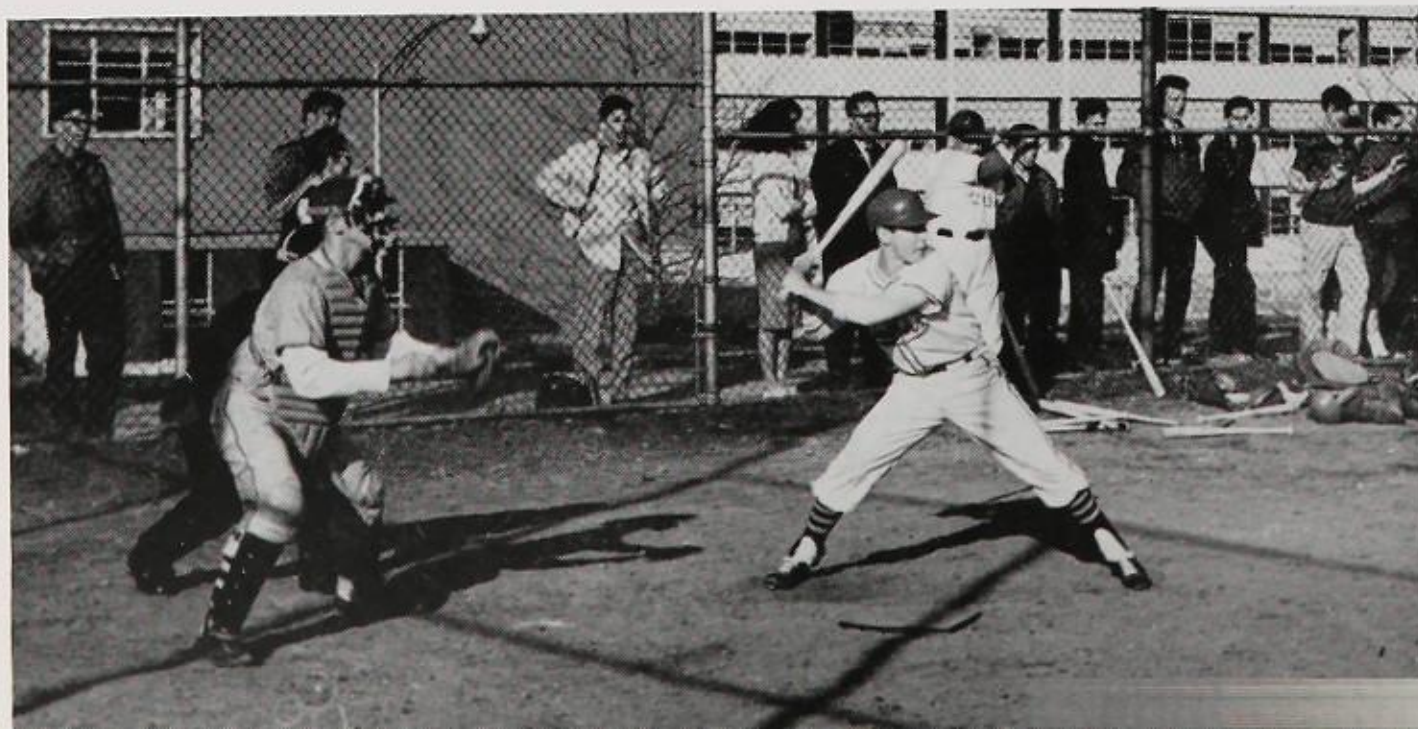

Mike Calderon, unanimous pick for rookie-of-the-year laurels, was the team's second top scorer. Mike shot well from the back-court sparking the Green and Gold in every game. Neil Rappaport, hefty center, hitting on turn-around jumpers and spins from the post, was another outstanding rookie. His rebounding prowess earned him a league-wide reputation as a "moose". Hank Kaplan, with a variety of shots, was another successful first year man. His fine foul shooting was very important.

Richie Bartner, the veteran of the team, was the top playmaker on the club. He looked first for assists and then for points. His hustling also foiled the scoring attempts of the backcourt men in the league.

Other senior lettermen, although they saw little action, contributed a great deal to the team on and off the floor. Among them were Andy Freedman, the greatest spirit booster on the club, Don Stevenson, a center with a 'dazzling array of hook shots, and lay-ups, Stu Rubin, capable in all positions, and Causewell Vaughn, a strong rebounder and hustler.

We extend our congratulations to coach William Meisel for his team's display of basketball ability and hustle. The Hornets proved they were the best coached.

Mr. Meisel overcame the cagers' inexperience through the basketball sense and fighting spirit with which he taught. Through his efforts, our club developed from a group of individuals to the poised, cohesive group of which our whole school is proud.

SWIMMING Our swimming team has finished another wonderful season under the coaching of Mr. Robert Smith. Despite the lack of a pool the team did surprisingly well. An expected loss to Evander, and two very close surprise losses to Clinton and Monroe, were the only black spots on our record.

The team was led by members of the Class of '60. Co-captains Jack Spies and Al Leon did an excellent job in the 200 yard freestyle and the 100 yard backstroke events respectively. Our medley, composed of Ron Lipsman, Dave Pessis, George Kissil and Robert Johnston, took first place in all but one of the meets. Ken Stern, a member of our record breaking first place medley in the championships two years ago, and holder of second place in the 100 yard backstroke event in the champs last year, swam the 100, 200, and 50 yard freestyle events, suffering only a single loss. Other highlights were Larry Lang (100 yard backstroke) and John Martens (100 yard backstroke).

Although the record lacked the glitter of previous years, the class of '60 should be prouder than ever of its swimming team, who fought tremendously against many hardships, and especially of its coach, Mr. Smith, who has always stressed sportsmanship and teamwork as well as victory.

CHEERLEADERS One group that has continued its fine traditions this year is our "Scintillating Seventeen". Captained by Carolyn Olney, this year's razzle-dazzlers include eight other seniors: Leslie Schaberg, Andrea Miller, Andrea Leskes, Susan Kosarin, Susan Paley, Barbara Rogow, Beryl Wernon, and Joan Nemhauser. These spirited nine are an added attraction at any major sports event.

INTRAMURALS The purpose of class activities is to enable the entire student body, regardless of ability, to engage in athletics. The Interclass Basketball League is the most important activity for boys. This year a new type of girls' program was introduced. It eliminated the traditional tournaments, and offered instead a wide variety of clubs to choose from: Bowling, Volleyball or Modern Dance.

In addition, there are several inter-term events annually. The most unusual of these was our football team, an addition which can be credited to the Class of '60. Our experienced squad, returning to action for the second year, trounced the Juniors twice, 35-0 and 28-0. Led by Tom Constabile, Bob Apfel, Stan Wilk, Mike Calderon, and Ronny Marino, the precedent we have set may someday result in the establishment of a varsity football team.

The Class of '60 can be proud of the part it played in bringing about an athletic revolution in our school. Besides supplying the material which has made our teams successful, we have created a new outlook on the sports scene. We now have confidence in our teams, spirit for our school, and the beginning of a winning tradition which will be continued in the years to come.

...and Be Sure to Smile

(A Guide to the College Interview)

Dear Posterity,

Realizing that you will someday have to face a college interview, I would like to suggest some humble hints for the occasion.

Never reveal your nervousness to the interviewer. (If it will aid any in this respect, it is permissible to go to an interview blindfolded.) This will probably mark you as an eccentric, but it will be useful when you are trying to prove that you do not follow the "herding instincts of the mob."

So much for what you must not do. Here is a list of things you should do:

1. BE GOOD LOOKING.—This may seem an unreasonable request. Certain minor things can be done, however, to improve one's looks at the last minute. Plastic surgery is one. You will find it invaluable for removing that extra ear that has always bothered you, or that H_2SO_4 scar that you got in chem lab. If plastic surgery is not within your means, there is a more desperate path you can follow. Upon walking into the interviewer's office, stumble. While falling grope for the light switch. This will enable you to conduct the entire interview in the dark. Your interviewer will not be left with any visual impression of you one way or the other; in some cases this may be for the best. Darkness has the added advantage of preventing the interviewer from taking notes, leaving him with no permanent information about you, and since "absence makes the heart grow fonder," you might get into college after all.
2. BE INTELLIGENT.—This is also an unreasonable request, but one that may be corrected by any number of methods. Most simple and direct is doctoring your I.Q. rating. However, not only is this illegal, but while you're accomplishing your aim, you will of necessity see your original rating, which may bring on shock or rigor mortis, making this a totally unfavorable method. In its stead, you may substitute an infallible (and legal) plan for making the interviewer believe you're intelligent. Simply laugh at all his jokes. (Extreme care must be exercised in determining which of his statements are supposed to be humorous. For instance, the remark, "I find your record very impressive," may or may not be funny, depending upon your interpretation, the tone of voice in which it is said, and, of course, your record!)
3. BE SINCERE.—The importance of sincerity cannot be overrated. The best method for convincing the interviewer that you are sincere is using a firm handshake (being careful not to crush the old man's fingers.) Once in a while you may come across an interviewer whose handshake is firmer than yours. In such a case you may find yourself in an arm wrestling contest, with the ultimate aim of proving who is more sincere. The sight of two supposedly sane people on an office floor, in their shirt-sleeves, perspiring profusely, staggers the imagination. Perhaps you had better be sincere some other way.

These suggestions, I am sure, will be universally helpful and should be followed religiously. I don't really care, though; I've already had my interview.

Drama Workshop

JUDY SHAPIRO

It was that time of year again—an evening at the beginning of April. The place was the auditorium of the Bronx High School of Science. Students and faculty gathered in the lobby outside and then took seats. They awaited eagerly one of the finest accomplishments of their extra-curricular program: the Annual Show.

For most of the audience, the Annual Show had come alive a few weeks before, with the first announcement of title, cast, and date. It would have its moment of glory and then would sink back in oblivion, to return again a year later. However, for the students of the Drama Workshop, the extra-curricular branch of the special Dramatics English classes, the challenge of producing and performing a full-scale dramatic production was a year-round affair.

To learn about the efforts that culminated in the Annual Show of 1960, the Kaufman and Hart comedy You Can't Take It With You, we took a "look behind the curtain" at a typical rehearsal. Behind the apparent chaos, there was intense activity. The difficult job of selecting the cast from the members of the Drama Workshop had been completed. Part of the cast, seated around a table, was attempting to finish at least one scene before 4:30. To us, the "family" seated at the table looked like Jeff Borak, Maurice Schmir, Joan Weisberg, Joan Hecker, and Necia Grant. We recognized Dan Paget, President of the Workshop, Myles Barrett, Joel Kramer, and Elizabeth Karlin watching the action from seats in front of the stage. The "costumes" were school clothes and the "living room" was the drama classroom. It was difficult to imagine that on opening night these students would not only look, but act, like a delightful group of eccentrics.

Elsewhere, other challenges were being met. The show was being publicized, tickets were being sold, a Playbill was being prepared, costumes were being made, and, for the first time, all the props were being made by Science students.

Slowly but surely, problem after problem was conquered. By opening night the play had been perfected to the point where it would be a credit to the tradition of Annual Shows at Science. Yet all this might not have been possible without the help of Mrs. Marion Kaplan, faculty advisor of the Workshop. The name "Mrs. Kaplan" has become synonymous with "Drama at Science."

We saw that the Annual Show was much more than a two-evening task. The amount of work done by the actors, the stage crew and technical staff was tremendous. But by meeting the challenge of the Annual Show and in their final accomplishment, the students of the Drama Workshop were amply rewarded.

JEFF GREENFIELD

Picture, if you will, a room hidden in the depths of the campus level of our school. Dominating this room is a long table, on which is strewn a tremendous pile of manuscripts. At the head of this table sits Jeff Borak, the chief potentate of Dynamo, the school's literary magazine. Immediately to his right is Miss Anita Baskind, the faculty guide. She constantly hands him papers and whispers into his ear. On either side of the table sit about twenty young men and women, each concentrating on out-talking the person next to him. Add to this a constant stream of people entering and leaving the room for no purpose whatsoever. This is a Dynamo meeting.

The staff of Dynamo has tried to publish the best creative efforts of the students of Bronx Science. The senior staff has the job of making the final decision on these efforts. The judgment often takes the shape of group therapy, with each member getting rid of all his pent-up hostilities. The "constructive criticisms" are usually to this effect:

FRAN STILLMAN: Here's a poem by someone from Creative Writing.

VIDA KAHN: It's in, but let's hear it anyway.

RUTH SCOLNICK: (begins to read the poem)

STEVE LUTZKER: Oh that thing—you call it a poem?

JEFF GREENFIELD: Where's that manuscript we were taking ap . . . , er, that is, discussing, last week?

PAM DODES: You mean the poem that rhymes?

JUDY WEINER: (meekly) I forgot it—I left it home.

In spite of the atmosphere, the school's literary magazine does get published annually.

This year, the senior staff of Dynamo grudgingly took on some sophomores and juniors to insure the perpetuation of this magazine. It was only through the constant recommendations of Miss Baskind that any lower-classmen were accepted at all; membership in Dynamo was guarded jealously.

In addition to selecting material for publication, the senior staff also had the job of picking the winners of the annual contest for the best short story, essay, and poem. This year's winners were Richard Jacobson, Maxine Zaretz, and Norman Levitt.

The finished product of Dynamo was presented to the school with a little pride and a lot of satisfaction. The school always responds in the same way:

"What's that wise-guy Chip Delaney trying to do?"

But the staff of Dynamo goes on, tirelessly toiling for Art in Science.

SURVEY

MICHAEL MARKMAN

Picture if you will a room hidden in the depths of the campus level of our school. Dominating this room is a long table, on which is strewn a tremendous pile of manuscripts. . . . Look familiar? It is in fact the same room described on the preceding page. But there is a serene difference. Where confusion reigned, a stately order presides. The hitherto strewn—with—copy tables lie spotless. Why? The room is empty. It awaits its next players who daily unfold a piece of the saga of the freely-censored press.

Scene I

The action takes place in and around The Room before the first period. First to appear is Survey Advisor, Arnold Canell. He is necessarily first—as faculty adviser, he holds the office key. He penetrates in succession the outer and inner offices, pausing to note that the vaguely dentistry odor is still issuing from the unused vaguely dentistry cut file. Mr. Canell takes his seat, busies himself sorting his mountainous mass of morning mail, and awaits the unimpeachable Mr. Balamuth. Dave Balamuth arrives for his early-morning conference with Mr. Canell. The Two decide whom they shall oppress as the most incompetent, insufferable editor of the day. This unfortunate is invariably next to appear. For this morning, we have chosen Roger Swaybill who, as editor of the yearbook, insists that his name be included near the beginning of the article.

Balamuth: Where's your make-up?

Swaybill: Oh this. Oh . . . No, my dermatologist went beserk yesterday with his sunlamp. I take ultra-vio . . .

Balamuth: Where's your make-up! (This last is said innumerable decibels louder and is punctuated with a sharp bang on the table.)

Canell: Moderation.

Balamuth: Incomplete sentence, sir.

Canell: So was that.

Swaybill: I was go . . . errr . . . well, I gave it to . . .

At this point, Michael Markman, managing editor, enters, carrying the manuscript of his first novel, Le Brun et Le Noir.

Swaybill: (Looking around) . . . to Markman.

Balamuth: MARKMAN! (two bangs)

Markman: Good morning.

Balamuth: Where's the page-one make-up?

Markman: I gave it to . . .

At this point, nobody chooses to enter the office.

Markman: . . . Uh, I never saw it.

Balamuth: (Bang)

Bell: (Ding)

The bell here is merely a device of expedience; it brings an end to an otherwise interminable discussion.

Intermission

The audience will kindly read the following program notes from the Playbill:

This year is one of transition and innovation. It is the first full year under the inspired advisership of Mr. Canell. It is the first full year in the New Whosambob.

Where on the road to publication do we stand? We are three-fourths of the way into deadline month. We have received one-fourth of the copy. Deadline month is the new regime's solution to the problem of deadline day (that day on which, according to old yearbooks, the copy was supposed to come in). For the record; deadline month is that month during which the copy is supposed to come in.

Scene II

We remain in the same playing area; action takes place the seventh period. Who's here? There are Messrs. Canell, Markman, and Swaybill and an unsightly group of juniors draped idly over chairs, tables, and window sills. Ellen Bay, guardian of the Esoterica of the Intelligentsia, bubbles into the office.

Miss Bay: Guess what everybody! I'm 2000 words over-set, not counting the science column.

Close on her trail is Dan Lowenstein, curator of page three.

Lowenstein: I have so many holes in my page it looks moth-eaten, counting the science column.

The careful observer will note that Larry J. Platt, the cheerful cherub of page four, was in the office from the beginning of the scene, but judiciously awaited his turn to speak in the proper numerical order.

Platt: Did somebody say there won't be any sports page this issue? I wish somebody would tell me what's going on with my page.

Conspicuous by his absence is Pete Rubinstein, editor-in-chief. His whereabouts have not been conclusively determined, but there is a general feeling that he has been in conference with Mr. Taffel for the past two months, trying to secure clearance for an editorial advocating the violent overthrow of the S.O.

In Praise of S.O.

The S.O. is my shepherd; I shall always want tickets.

It maketh me sneak in before the first; it leadeth me past the Hall Squad.

It restoreth my committee; it teacheth me parliamentary procedure for confusion's sake.

Yea, though I ride in the forbidden elevator, I will fear no teacher;
for thy spirit is with me;
thy elevator pass it comforts me.

Thou sendeth for me in the middle of a lesson;

Thou filleth my extracurricular card; my points runneth over.

Surely the spirit of the S.O. shall follow me all the days of my life;

And I shall remember the counting of ballots forever.

CRYING TOWEL

Remember when . . .

They gave out two different tests . . . you lost your boyfriend's ring . . . you dropped your tray in the cafeteria . . . your hands turned yellow from nitric acid . . . the boys discovered younger girls . . . Dr. Silver caught you in the wrong lunch period . . . you had two minutes to get from the gym to Social studies in 301 . . . you found out your College Board scores . . . she said, "I'd love to, Bill," and your name is Bob . . . there was supposed to be a teacher's strike and you didn't do your homework . . . everyone but you had the Asian flu . . . you fell asleep during first period . . . all the freshmen and sophomores got invited to your Senior Prom . . . you sneaked on the elevator and Mr. Force got on . . . you were rejected by three colleges . . . you added wrong on the first part of a ten-point question . . . you were a wallflower . . . you started a measure ahead of the rest of the chorus . . . you forgot to do your Regents paper in ink . . . your alarm didn't go off . . . you were the only one to sing "Oh, Baby!" during the alma mater . . . you got pink carnations for your lovely orange formal . . . you stayed up till six a.m. to finish your English term-paper and your teacher didn't read it . . . you finally graduated from the B.H.S.S. — two years later than the rest of the class!
